

Which brand of vaccine should I get

Three COVID-19 vaccines are currently available. They include the Pfizer-BioNtech, Moderna, and the Johnson & Johnson vaccines. Each brand of vaccine is slightly different, but they are all safe and work well. You should get the brand that is first available to you.

All 3 COVID-19 vaccine brands:

- Can be used in the United States
- Were tested in trials with at least 30,000 participants each and included people from various races, ethnicities, age groups, and genders to ensure safety
- Are proven to protect against serious illness, hospitalization, and death from COVID-19

How many doses do I need?

- You need 2 doses of the Pfizer-BioNtech and Moderna vaccines
- You only need 1 dose of the Johnson & Johnson vaccine
- VDH does not recommend one brand of vaccine over another
- VDH encourages anyone who wants a vaccine to get one when it is available

The supply of all 3 of these vaccines is very limited.
The best vaccine to get is the first one that is available to you.
