Mr. Farmer,

This letter is in response to your questions concerning the status of the Clearstream Model D Series line of treatment units in Virginia. To clarify our position, we intend to discontinue the offering of the D and N series units for sale in Virginia as soon as is practical. We are maintaining our approval of those units with the State but see no need to offer for sale multiple treatment series in a state when one series, the DA, accomplishes all desired treatment goals and applications necessary.

We are of course sympathetic to your complaint that designers have spent time and money incorporating the Clearstream Model D units in their work product prior to our announcement. Our arbitrary "deadline" did not consider that reality.

We would like to amend the deadline to eliminate the timing problem for the designers and their customers.

We would like to suggest moving the October 1, 2021 deadline to December 31, 2021. This should give all the designers the ability to finish their design work and file for new permits before the deadline. We will make D units available after that date in order to satisfy the required systems for those projects.

This change in product line availability was never meant to cut off a design in process or to cause any financial discomfort to the designers you work with or their customers. This process is meant to simplify for everyone the process of utilizing Clearstream products in Virginia.

Thank You,
