People experiencing economic instability are more likely to experience chronic health conditions, disability, and premature death.

38.5% of all survey respondents reported that there were adults in their household experiencing difficulties finding or keeping work.

This issue impacted our Spanish speaking residents significantly more, with 64% of all Spanish language respondents reporting difficulty finding or keeping work.

The top three reasons identified by Spanish language respondents as to why they were experiencing difficulty finding work:

Access to Transportation

People who do not have access to reliable transportation are more likely to reschedule or miss appointments, which leads to delayed or missed care.

of respondents say transportation is a barrier for work and 7.7% say it's why services are hard to get.

In my home, I don't know how to drive. My husband neither. Nothing. I go to work and return on foot.
