

Greene Care Clinic Results

Photovoice is a qualitative research method that uses photography to capture community voices. The goal of these photovoice projects sponsored by Move2Health is to identify existing community assets, so organizations can build upon and further support those assets.

Greene Care Clinic photos and focus group data regarding community assets were evaluated. Researchers found these themes as areas to help reduce and eliminate health disparities and promote equity.

- Transportation

- Transportation was pulled as a theme because of photos of cars and talks around access to cars/public transportation as a way to have freedom and access to various locations
  - In what ways can we support and improve access to transportation so everyone has the freedom to travel places they need/want to go?

- Housing

- Housing was a theme because of the safety, security, and freedom that people felt when they had access to their own space
  - How can we provide more affordable housing options so everyone has the safety, security, and freedom of their own space?

- Access to healthcare/medication

- This was a theme when talking about affordability and access to care. People talked about places that support access and affordability
  - How can we increase knowledge about services providing affordable care?

- Community Centered Areas

- Community centered areas were a theme because of the talks around getting to know your community and community members and finding ways to support other people through community programming (such as having a suggested donation to participate in a community event)
  - How can we create spaces that support and further build community relationships?
